

The FY2010 Homeland Security Appropriations Bill is focused on securing our nation's borders and preparing for any potential disaster. Priorities in the bill are focused on securing our borders and enforcing our immigration laws; protecting the American people from terrorist threats and other vulnerabilities, and ensuring the Department is nimble enough to address future threats; preparing for, responding to, and recovering from all-hazards; supporting our State, local, Tribal, and private sector partners in homeland security with resources and information; and giving the Department resources to strengthen financial, procurement, IT systems, and other management tools that it needs to succeed while eliminating or reducing programs that are ineffective or duplicative.
